SUNDAY INTRODUCTIONS

First reading Sirach 27:30-28:7
 Our first reading is a fascinating reflection, both realistic and logical. Realistic: we all find ourselves in situations where forgiveness is called for. Logical: the reasoning anticipates the teaching of Jesus: And forgive us our debts, as we also have forgiven our debtors. (Matt 6:12)

Second reading Romans 14:7-9
 Out of context, this short reading risks being unclear. The historic setting is conflict over two things: how much of Jewish tradition to hold on to and how to live in the surrounding pagan society. In these practical matters, members of the community are condemning each other, whereas Paul insists that what unites the whole body in Christ is deeper than the differences.

Gospel Matthew 18:21-35
 If you've ever asked yourself how often should I forgive someone, then this Gospel is for you! The parable is disturbing in its details and challenging in its message.
